The Montana State Archives is the legal repository for non-current state records having permanent or enduring value. Records transferred to the Montana State Archives are subject to review and selection by the Archives staff. Records and/or copies of records transferred to the State Archives are available to originating agencies whenever needed, with the understanding that they will be returned to the Archives within a reasonable period of time. Records are available to the public only at the Montana Historical Society, subject to restrictions of law and any restrictions listed above.
